MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR :

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and faithful subjects, the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, in Session assembled, approach Your Honour with sentiments of unfeigned devotion and loyalty to Her Majesty's person and Government, and humbly beg to present for Your Honour's acceptance a Bill intituled, "An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the Public Service for the fiscal years ending the 31st day of March, 1966, and the 31st day of March, 1967."

To this Act the Royal Assent was announced by the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly in the following words:—

"The Honourable the Lieutenant Governor doth thank Her Majesty's dutiful and loyal Subjects, accept their benevolence and assent to this Bill in Her Majesty's name."

The Honourable the Lieutenant Governor was then pleased to deliver the following gracious speech:—

Mr. Speaker and Members of The Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

As this Fourth Session of the 27th Parliament concludes its labours, I voice appreciation of your zeal and energy in dealing with the heavy legislative programme initiated by the Executive Council of Ontario for your consideration.

During this Session, of the 37 Private Bills also presented, 30 received Royal Assent. Notice was given of 34 Private Members' Resolutions of which 32 were debated at length. 195 Public Bills were introduced. Government measures accounted for 170 and, of these, 165 received Royal Assent.

Originating in 19 Departments, the legislation to which you have given careful consideration and approval has covered a wide range of subject and scope. The extensive nature and importance of these enactments arose from their involvement with the health, well-being and rights, as well as the responsibilities, of the people of this Province. They also encompassed many phases of governmental administration and activity.

The importance, in our economy, of the industry of Agriculture was emphasized beyond all doubt in the Bills introduced affecting the agricultural community and in the Ministerial statements made during the House proceedings. The Crop Insurance Act, 1966 was an important advance in providing protection for the farmer against perils to crops. My Government will continue to represent the interests of the members of the farming community of Ontario, and to preserve all rights to which they are entitled, both in the area of Provincial and Federal jurisdiction, and to that end will continue to co-operate with the appropriate authorities in arriving at solutions for problems of mutual concern.

The Government's planned programme for the improvement of many areas within the community has resulted in the passage of a number of Bills, chief among which are The Consumer Protection Act, 1966, The Securities Act, 1966, The Legal Aid Act, 1966, The Public Finance Companies' Investment Act, 1966, and The Corporations Amendment Act, 1966.

Regional Development Councils have been established, and the Ontario Development Corporation was created, by legislation which was approved.

In the field of education, necessary amendments to several Acts were made. The Public Libraries Act was completely reorganized with new provisions for regional library development and the appointment of an Ontario Provincial Library Council.

The Ontario Education Capital Aid Corporation has been established as part of a programme to assure to municipalities and school boards a dependable source of funds at a moderate rate of interest through the purchase of their debentures issued for the construction of schools. These funds are also available through The Ontario Universities Capital Aid Corporation for the purchase of debentures from universities.

Provision was made for tightened control by the Ontario Water Resources Commission over water management in Ontario.

Legislation of far-reaching importance in various fields of health was enacted during this Session. The Medical Services Insurance Plan is now in operation. The first groups to benefit were those in receipt of Social Assistance who have been deriving the benefits of the programme since April 1st.

This year is observed the 50th anniversary of the proclamation in 1916 of the Act which established the Department of Highways in Ontario. One year later an Act was passed to provide for a Provincial highway system which has expanded far beyond the dreams of the planners of those days and has promoted the growth and development of Ontario, the Province of Opportunity.

In the area of labour relations, extensive revisions have been made to existing legislation to meet current needs. Section 89 of The Labour Relations Act was repealed.

The passage of The Woodlands Improvement Act, 1966 will permit entering into agreements with the owners of private lands for the purpose of conducting forestry management and was one of the highlights of the legislative proposals of the Department of Lands and Forests. The introduction of the tubed-seedling programme will be of additional strength to the reforestation programme of the Province.

The Report of the Select Committee on Mining has been presented to the Legislature, and my Ministers are reviewing the recommendations which will be of assistance to the industry and the Department of Mines.

Important and far-reaching amendments to The Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act were introduced and adopted.

Amendments to The Municipal Act and The Ontario Municipal Employees Retirement System Act have provided the municipalities and their employees with the opportunity for improvements in pensions and other fringe benefits.

In its citizenship programme, the Department of the Provincial Secretary and Citizenship this year is also extending to Hamilton its summer course for teachers in teaching English as a second language combined with a concentrated programme of evening language classes for newcomers. Special features of the language training programme in Hamilton are daytime classes for shift workers. Experimental projects will also be conducted for immigrant children in co-operation with the Toronto and Hamilton School Boards.

Public Welfare legislation has been submitted and approved in anticipation of meshing with Federal enactments. The Province will thus share in a wide range of welfare services and allow the development of welfare programmes which will permit more flexibility in their operations. Under these Acts the municipalities will also benefit from increased financial aid to serve the cases for which they are responsible.

Amendments have been made to The Parole Act, and to certain other Acts within the purview of the Department of Reform Institutions to bring such legislation into conformity with practices in other Departments.

Legislation was passed to provide for the registration of rates by tourist establishment operators at the time of application for a licence. Provision has also been made for the establishment of regulations which would require information centres to be licensed by the Department of Tourism and Information.

Amendments to The Highway Traffic Act have provided for the setting of safety standards for tires, and for the requirement of safety devices on motor vehicles.

Legislation has been submitted and approved concerning members of the Public Service of Ontario whose dedication of purpose, and efficient service, merit our recognition and commendation which I now extend.

With the affairs of the Province in excellent condition, and its sound financial position having had the thorough scrutiny of Honourable Members, approval has been given to provide Supply to defray the expenditures for the requirements of the Departments of the Government as in their Estimates submitted. In Her Majesty's name I thank you.

May Divine Providence guide and protect you.

The Provincial Secretary then said:—

Mr. Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly:

It is the will and pleasure of the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor that this Legislative Assembly be prorogued and this Legislative Assembly is accordingly prorogued.

RODERICK LEWIS, Q.C.,
Clerk of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

1. INTRODUCTION

This system is in substantial conformity with the Classification of Accounts prepared by the Canadian Gas Association and with the systems prescribed for use by gas companies elsewhere in Canada.

Inclusion of any item or account in this prescribed system of accounts does not necessarily imply the Board's acceptance of any expenditure or procedure suggested by the use of such an account.

2. RECORDS

The books to be used in recording transactions shall conform to accepted accounting procedure and every account in the general ledger, in which transactions are assembled for balance sheet purposes, shall bear reference to the account number and title under which it is classified. However, each gas company may, in addition, use a different system of account numbers, provided the account numbers herein described appear in the descriptive headings of the ledger accounts.

The records shall be kept in such form as to permit determination of the correctness of the accounting, and with sufficient particularity to show fully the facts pertaining to all entries made in the accounts.

Where full information is not recorded in the general books, the entries therein shall be supported by other records in which full details shall be shown. The general book entries shall contain sufficient reference to the detailed records to permit ready identification, and the detailed records shall be filed in such manner as to be readily accessible for examination by representatives of the Board. Companies are at liberty to subdivide or, with the consent of the Board, condense the general and primary accounts here given.

3. PURPOSE OF ACCOUNT GROUPING

The accounts of this classification are grouped so as to show the results of the group of which they form a part. The plant accounts are classified according to the various types of plant included therein. The operating and maintenance accounts are classified according to the function which benefited from the expense and may be further subdivided by responsibility.

Balance sheet accounts (account No. series 100 and 200)

The balance sheet and related accounts are designed to disclose the company's financial condition at the balance sheet date, by showing the assets, liabilities, capital stock and related items and the balance of retained earnings (or deficit).

Income accounts (account Nos. 300 to 349 inclusive)

The accounts in this grouping summarize revenues and expenses and are designed to show for each fiscal year the total amount of money that the company has earned for services, the cost of rendering services, the accrued return on investments, and the amount of accrued taxes and accrued charges for the use of money or property of others. Revenues and expenses of non-gas operations shall be included in the accounts provided for this type of revenue and expense. The net balance of income (or loss) shall be transferred to retained earnings.

Retained earnings accounts (account Nos. 350 to 399 inclusive)

The accounts in this grouping form a connecting link between the income accounts and retained earnings (or deficit) as stated on the balance sheet and provide an analysis of changes in retained earnings (or deficit) balance during the year.

In addition to this final summarization of regular financial results, the group also provides accounts to disclose the results of unusual items which in aggregate are so material in relation to net income of the year that inclusion therein would impair its significance and be misleading, and which are of a nature not clearly identifiable with the company's typical business transactions.

Plant accounts (account No. series 400)

The accounts in this grouping are designed to classify the company's plant used in gas operations.

The physical plant not used in gas operations is provided for in a balance sheet account for other plant. The plant records shall be so maintained as to show separately expenditures for each addition and replacement project.

Operating revenue accounts (account No. series 500)

The accounts in this grouping are designed to classify all revenue which the company is entitled to receive from gas operations and from operations incident thereto.

Operating and maintenance accounts (account No. series 600, 700 and 800)

The accounts in these groupings are designed to classify the expenses of operating and maintaining plant, property and equipment in service and the cost of gas purchased and the cost of gas used in connection with gas operations.

Within the operating and maintenance accounts are separate groups of accounts for each function, such as Gas Supply, Transmission, Distribution, General and Administrative to facilitate the preparation of statements required for these operations.

Clearing accounts (account No. series 900)

The accounts in this group include expenditures relating to operations, maintenance and construction, which cannot be conveniently distributed directly to a particular expense or plant account. The Company may at its option use other clearing accounts in addition to those contained in this classification. Amounts charged to these accounts shall be accumulated and then charged out on an equitable basis. Balances in clearing accounts shall be substantially cleared not later than the end of the fiscal year unless balances held therein relate to a future period.

4. ACCOUNT DESCRIPTIONS

Lists of "examples" or "components" appearing in the text of the accounts or elsewhere herein are for the purpose of more clearly indicating the application of the prescribed accounting. The lists are intended to be representative, but not exhaustive. The appearance of an item in a list warrants the inclusion of the item only when the text also indicates inclusion, inasmuch as the same item frequently appears in more than one list. The proper entry in each instance must be determined by the texts of the accounts.

5. SUBMISSION OF QUESTIONS

Since uniformity of accounting by gas companies in Ontario is a basic reason for this system of accounts, companies shall submit all questions of doubtful interpretation of the accounting rules to the Board for determination.

6. PLANT ACQUIRED OR CONSTRUCTED

The primary plant accounts shall record the cost to acquire or construct gas plant, except as otherwise provided in these instructions. If consideration given for such plant is other than cash, the cash equivalent shall be charged to the applicable accounts and sufficient details of the actual consideration shall be retained to provide for identification.

Where the company purchases all or part of the existing facilities of a non-affiliated gas company, the cost to acquire gas plant shall be distributed to the accounts, unless the Board determines that a portion of the acquisition cost is not properly includible as gas plant. Such amounts shall then be included in account No. 104, "Gas Plant Acquisition Adjustments". If the facilities are purchased from an affiliated company, both the cost to the affiliated company and the accumulated depreciation to the date of acquisition shall be recorded in the company's books.

Where, at the time this system of accounts becomes applicable to a gas company, any part of the plant is recorded at redetermined values rather than at cost, the company may continue to so record such property until the Board directs that all or part of the difference between cost and redetermined value be transferred to account No. 107, "Other Gas Plant Adjustments". Whenever the Board excludes from the rate base any of the difference, such exclusion shall be a sufficient direction for a corresponding transfer from the Gas Plant Accounts to account No. 107, "Other Gas Plant Adjustments".

If the plant is constructed by or for the company, the cost to be recorded shall include the cost of labour, material and supplies, special machine and heavy work equipment service, transportation, contract work, insurance, injuries and damages, privileges, overhead charged to construction and interest during construction. These items of cost are defined below.

Cost of labour includes the amount paid for labour, (including fringe benefits) to the company's own employees. When employees are specifically assigned to construction work, their pay, while thus engaged, shall be included in the cost of the work. No charge shall be made to primary plant accounts for the pay of employees whose services in connection with construction are merely incidental, except as provided for in cost of overhead charged to construction.

The travelling and other incidental expenses of employees shall be distributed in accordance with distribution of the pay of such employees.

Cost of material and supplies includes the purchase price of material and supplies less trade discounts realized, and including cost of small tools, ad valorem taxes, inspection, transportation and loading; where appropriate, a suitable proportion of stores expenses.

In charging the plant accounts with material and supplies used, proper allowance shall be made for the value of unused portions and other salvage, the material recovered from temporary pipe scaffolding and other temporary structures used in construction, and small tools recovered and usable for other purposes.

Cost of special machine and heavy work equipment service includes the cost of labour, material and supplies, depreciation and other expenses incurred in maintaining and operating power shovels, scrapers, pile drivers, dredges, ditchers, material loaders and other labour-saving machines; also amounts paid to others for rent and maintenance of such machines. It does not include the cost of small tools and other individual items of small value or short life which are included in the cost of material and supplies.

When a construction project necessitates the purchase of equipment to be used exclusively therein until its work on the project is completed, the cost of such equipment shall be included in the accounts representing the cost of the work and no charge shall be made to expenses for depreciation on such equipment while the cost remains so charged. The amount realized from any subsequent sale, or the appraised value of equipment retained after the completion of the work for which it was purchased, shall be credited to the accounts charged with its cost. The appraised value of such equipment retained shall be debited to the appropriate primary account, and thereafter, for the purposes of accounting, such appraised value shall be considered as the cost of the equipment.

Cost of transportation includes the cost of transporting men, materials and supplies, special machine outfits and appliances and tools for construction purposes. The cost of the transportation of construction material to the point where material is received by the company shall be included, so far as practicable, as a part of the cost of such material.

Cost of contract work includes amounts paid for work performed under contract by other companies or individuals.

Cost of insurance, injuries and damages includes that portion of premiums incurred for insuring plant and personnel during construction, also the charges for protection against fire and wilful destruction and the cost of injuries to persons, damage to property of others and damages to plant incident to construction. Insurance recovered shall be credited to the accounts chargeable with the expenditures necessary to restore the damaged plant. The injuries and damages incident to the removal of the old structures or parts thereof shall be charged to the account recording retirement costs.

Cost of privileges includes compensation for temporary privileges such as the use of public property or streets, in connection with construction work.

Cost of overhead charged to construction includes engineering, supervision, administrative salaries and expenses, construction engineering and supervision, legal expenses, taxes and other similar items. The assignment of overhead costs to particular jobs or units shall be on the basis of a reasonable allocation of actual costs. The records supporting the entries for overhead charged to construction costs shall be maintained so as to show the total amount for each element of overhead for the year and the basis of distribution.

Cost of interest during construction may include the cost to the company for the use of funds for the purposes of construction, whether or not long term debt has been incurred. The basis of calculation of cost shall be as outlined in account No. 324, "Interest During Construction (Credit)".

Contributions or grants in cash, services or property from governments or government agencies, corporations, individuals, and others for contributions in aid of construction shall be applied as a reduction of the primary plant accounts to which they refer, if not recorded separately in account No. 299, "Contributions and Grants".

Date devoted to service

On the date the plant is devoted to service, the company shall cease to capitalize interest on such plant as is complete and in service and from that date it shall compute and charge to expenses or other appropriate accounts an amount representing depreciation as determined under section 10 of these instructions. Operating revenues received and operating expenses incurred after the date devoted to public service shall be included in the appropriate operating revenue and expense accounts.

Work order and property record system required

(A) Each utility shall record all construction and retirements of utility plant by means of work orders or job orders. Separate work orders may be opened for additions to and retirements of utility plant, or retirements may be included with the construction work order, provided, however, that all items relating to the retirements shall be kept separate from those relating to construction and provided further that any maintenance costs involved in the work shall likewise be segregated.

(B) Each utility shall keep its work order system so as to show the nature of additions to or retirements of utility plant, the total cost thereof, the source or sources of costs, and the utility plant account or accounts to which charged or credited. Work orders covering jobs of short duration may be cleared monthly.

(C) Each utility shall maintain records in which, for each plant account, the amounts of the annual additions and retirements are classified so as to show the number and cost of the various retirement units or other appropriate record units included therein.

7. ADDITIONS

Additions are increases in gas plant through purchase or construction of additional plant and/or replacement of existing plant. The cost of additions to or replacement of gas plant shall be charged to the appropriate plant account.

Description of typical elements of construction are referred to in General Instructions, Section 6, "Plant Acquired or Constructed". All expenditures relevant to new construction are capitalized. After the completion of initial construction, only the costs directly connected to additions or replacements of plant are capitalized.

For the purpose of avoiding undue refinement in accounting for additions and replacements of gas plant, all property charged within the plant accounts shall be considered as consisting of Plant Units and Minor Items of Plant.

Plant units—Each company shall use its own list of plant units, such lists to be filed with and subject to the approval of the Board. A plant unit is not necessarily a complete structure but may be part of a complete structure where such a part is a physically distinct part of the structure, and the amount of money involved is material. It is contemplated that the list of plant units will be revised and amended from time to time as experience and conditions warrant.

Plant units shall be accounted for in the following manner:

Additions—The cost of a plant unit shall be charged to the appropriate plant account.

Retirements—The ledger value of the plant unit shall be credited to the appropriate plant account.

Replacements—The ledger value of the original plant unit shall be credited to the appropriate plant account, and the cost of the replacement shall be charged to the appropriate plant account.

Minor items of plant are the associated parts or items composing a plant unit, and shall be accounted for in the following manner:

Additions—The cost of a minor item of plant which did not previously exist shall be charged to the appropriate plant account unless excluded therefrom by the minimum rule.

Retirements—The ledger value of a minor item of plant shall be credited to the appropriate plant account. If, however, the ledger value of the minor item retired and not replaced will be accounted for on the retirement of the plant unit with which it is associated, no adjustment shall be made to the plant accounts when such minor item is retired.

Replacements—The cost of a minor item of plant shall be charged to the appropriate expense account.

The minimum rule is intended for accounting convenience to provide a dollar limit on the charging of costs of minor items of plant to plant accounts. When costs of such items are less than selected minimum dollar amounts, such costs shall be charged to the expense accounts. No change is to be made in the selected minimum dollar amounts except by approval of the Board.

Repairs made during plant changes—see General Instructions, Section 9, "Maintenance".

Relocation of pipe line—see General Instructions, Section 8, "Retirements"

Second-hand plant—When second-hand plant acquired (not previously owned by the company) is in such physical condition that it is necessary to make extensive repairs to bring it up to the standard required by the company, the cost of such repairs shall be included in the appropriate plant account.

Major renewals and repairs—When the cost of renewals to parts of a plant unit, exclusive of the cost of dismantling and/or repairing old parts reused exceeds fifty per cent of the replacement cost of a new plant unit of the kind and class as rebuilt at the time of rebuilding, the plant unit shall be considered as rebuilt.

The rebuilt plant unit shall be accounted for as an addition and the old plant accounted for as retired from service. The term "cost of renewals" means the cost of material (other than second-hand parts remaining in the rebuilt plant unit) plus the cost of labour used in the rebuilding process, exclusive of the expense of dismantling and repairing old parts reused.

The charge to the appropriate plant account for the rebuilt plant unit shall be the sum of (1) the value of the second-hand parts remaining in the rebuilt plant unit, appropriately valued and (2) the cost of labour and additional material applied; both exclusive of the expense of dismantling and repairing second-hand parts reused.

8. RETIREMENTS

(A) Depreciable plant—When a plant unit is retired from gas operations the ledger value thereof shall be eliminated by crediting the appropriate plant accounts. When plant comprising less than a plant unit is removed from service, no adjustment shall be made to the plant accounts if its value will be retired upon the retirement of the plant unit with which it is associated. If the plant being retired is classified as depreciable, the ledger value less the net salvage value and/or insurance, if any, recovered shall be charged to accumulated depreciation.

Ledger value is the amount at which property is carried in the plant account. In case the value of any portion of plant is not shown separately, the ledger value of that portion shall be its proportionate share of the value of the entire group in which the particular plant is included.

Salvage value represents the value of material recovered from plant retired. If sold, this value shall be the selling price. If retained, for use by the company and charged to account No. 150, "Material and Supplies—Gas", or other accounts of this classification, this value shall be the ledger value of the material. Net salvage value means the salvage value less removal costs. In a case where the insurance recovery and salvage exceeds the ledger value, and the amount of the excess is material, the total credit to the accumulated depreciation account shall not exceed the ledger value. Any such excess, if material, shall be credited to account No. 351, "Profit from Sale of Plant".

Ordinary retirements result from causes reasonably assumed to have been contemplated in prior depreciation provisions, and normally may be expected to occur when plant reaches the end of its expected service life. In the case of such a retirement, accumulated depreciation shall be charged with the ledger value and the cost of removal and credited with amounts realized for salvage and insurance. There is no charge or credit to income for an ordinary retirement. (See General Instructions, Section 10 (B), "Depreciation".)

Extraordinary retirements result from causes not reasonably assumed to have been anticipated or contemplated in prior depreciation or amortization provisions. Such causes include unusual casualties (fire, storm, flood, etc.), sudden and complete obsolescence, or unexpected and permanent shutdown of an operating assembly or plant. An extraordinary retirement results in a loss (or gain) to the extent that the net charges (or credits) would unduly deplete (or inflate) the accumulated depreciation or amortization accounts. A loss (or gain) is comprised of the difference between the plant ledger value plus cost of removal less salvage and insurance recoveries and the related depreciation or amortization determined in an equitable manner.

Losses as a result of an extraordinary retirement may be charged to account No. 355, "Loss from Sale or Retirement of Plant", or to account No. 171, "Extraordinary Plant Losses". Gains, if any, as a result of an extraordinary retirement shall be credited to account No. 351, "Profit from Sale of Plant", subject to the prior approval of the Board; otherwise, they shall be credited to account No. 171 to offset other losses, resulting from extraordinary retirements. However, any proceeds in excess of original cost of plant retired shall be credited to account No. 351, "Profit from Sale of Plant".

(B) Non-depreciable plant—When non-depreciable plant is no longer required for gas purposes but is retained by the company, its ledger value shall be transferred to account No. 110, "Other Plant". When non-depreciable plant is sold, the ledger value thereof shall be credited to the applicable plant account and any profit or loss, if material, shall be recorded in account No. 351, "Profit from Sale of Plant", account No. 355, "Loss from Sale or Retirement of Plant", or account No. 171, "Extraordinary Plant Losses", as applicable.

If the profit or loss on disposal of non-depreciable plant is immaterial, such profit or loss shall be recorded in account No. 319, "Other Income" or account No. 329, "Other Income Deductions", as applicable.

(C) Pipe relocations—Where a pipe line is relocated the part of the line changed shall be considered plant retired and the ledger value thereof shall be credited to the appropriate plant account. The new line shall be considered an addition and its cost charged to the appropriate plant account. The cost of such pipe line changes which involve less than a plant unit of line pipe shall be charged to expense.

Where a company's pipe line or any part thereof is located in accordance with an agreement, the terms of which may require the company to relocate all or part of its pipe line and the circumstances are such that the company has no reasonable alternative but to relocate a plant unit or more of line pipe and such relocation would be a replacement (as defined in General Instructions, Section 7) unless otherwise provided, the company may, with the approval of the Board, charge the cost of relocation to expenses of the period in which the work was done. Where such relocation results from action by a governmental authority it may be accounted for in a similar manner.

(D) Pipe replacements—Where the retired pipe is replaced with other pipe in the same location, the cost of opening and back-filling the trench, together with the cost of hauling, laying and connecting the pipe, and other costs of pipe line construction, shall be charged to the appropriate plant account. The cost of removing the retired pipe from the trench shall be accounted for as cost of recovering the salvage. The cost of reconditioning the line pipe not removed shall be accounted for as maintenance and not as retirements and replacements.

If the retired line pipe is not replaced in the same location, the cost of opening and back filling the trench from which the pipe is removed, together with the cost of removing the pipe, shall be accounted for as cost of recovering the salvage.

9. MAINTENANCE

The cost of repairs to be included in the maintenance accounts shall include the cost of inspecting to determine what repairs are necessary; also the cost of adjusting, repairing, or replacing parts, and the cost of inspecting, testing and running of parts to determine that the repairs were properly made and that the repaired items are ready for service.

When repairs are made to existing plant concurrent with a plant addition or replacement, the cost of new repair material, plus the labour cost actually incurred, shall be charged to the appropriate plant account. If such repairs do not include a plant addition or replacement, then the cost shall be charged to the expense account appropriate for repairs to the plant being repaired.

There shall be included in the cost of repairs, incidental costs such as the construction and removal of false work in connection with maintenance; the cost of relocating pipe line plant when retirement accounting for units of plant is not involved; the cost of repairing fences, sidewalks, driveways and streets within or adjacent to such grounds.

The elements of maintenance shall include labour, materials and supplies, special machine and heavy work equipment service, transportation, contract work, privileges, protection from casualties and injuries and damages, (as outlined in General Instructions, Section 6) for similar elements of cost of plant acquired or constructed. Royalties paid for patent rights on mechanical appliances used in repairs shall be included in the cost of repairs.

Equalization of maintenance expenses—The cost of maintaining plant shall be included in the appropriate primary accounts in the month in which the expense is incurred. In case the company adopts a budget or estimate, for all or part of the fiscal year, of expenses includible in one or more primary maintenance accounts, an equitable monthly proportion of the difference between the budgeted or estimated expenses and the actual expenses chargeable each month may be debited or credited to the appropriate expense accounts with contra entries in account No. 275, "Gas Cost and Maintenance Equalization". If certain primary accounts only are budgeted, the company's records shall show, for amounts included in the equalization reserve account, the amount of the equalization assignable to each such primary account.

10. DEPRECIATION

(A) There shall be charged monthly to account No. 303, "Depreciation", or other appropriate accounts and credited to the account for accumulated depreciation amounts which will allocate the service value of the plant over its estimated service life in a systematic and rational manner. The service value of the assets, for depreciation purposes shall be their cost or redetermined value where this is recorded instead of cost with the approval of the Board, less their estimated net salvage value. Net salvage value means the salvage value less removal costs. The service life is the period of time between the installation or acquisition of the plant and its retirement for accounting purposes. In determining the amount of the allocation, consideration may properly be given to pertinent factors such as variations in use, increasing obsolescence or inadequacy.

(B) The charges for depreciation shall be computed in conformity with the group system under the straight-line method or other methods approved by the Board. The group system contemplates that some part of the investment in a group of assets probably will be recovered through salvage realizations, and that probably there will be variations in the service lives of the assets constituting the group, even among assets of the same class. The depreciation provision determined for the group is a weighted average of the various individual expectancies of life and salvage for the respective assets in the group. It is not the intention of the classification to require the company to keep records of the accumulated depreciation of each unit of plant. However, for purposes of reporting to the Board, summaries shall be maintained so that the accumulated depreciation can be subdivided to show separately the amount applicable to each primary account or to each group of primary accounts comprised of plant which performs similar functions.

When the retirement or disposal of any individual asset in a group occurs under circumstances reasonably provided for through accumulated depreciation, it may be assumed such provision has been made. Thus, whether the period of service is less or greater than average, accumulated depreciation attributable to an asset at the time of retirement under such circumstances is equal to the cost, except for that portion reasonably assumed recoverable through salvage realization. Assets remaining in use after reaching the average life expectancy are not regarded as fully depreciated until actual retirement. (See Section 8 (A) of these General Instructions.)

(C) All primary plant accounts (with the exception of accounts in the 400 series for "Land" and account No. 458, "Base Pressure Gas") are classed as accounts covering assets which are depreciable. In addition, to the extent that account Nos. 401, "Franchises and Consents", 402, "Other Intangible Plant", or other similar accounts such as "Land Rights" contain items which are subject to recognizable loss in value, such items shall be depreciable.

(D) Except as herein otherwise provided, monthly depreciation charges under the straight-line method shall be computed by applying the annual percentage rate to the depreciation base as of the first of each month and dividing the result by twelve, or if the company obtains prior approval of the Board, by applying the annual percentage rate to the depreciation base at the beginning of the company year and dividing that result by twelve. The company may, at its option where the amount is material, compute depreciation charges commencing on the date the plant was actually transferred to service rather than the first of the month following transfer to service. A company which, at the effective date of this System of Accounts, is using a year-end depreciation base shall continue to do so until revised rates of depreciation are established after the company's next comprehensive depreciation study.

(E) A separate rate for each group of primary accounts or each primary account shall be used in computing depreciation charges. The rate so established may itself be a composite rate due to the different types of assets in the primary account. The rate shall be such as has been approved by the Board except that where no rate for each group of primary accounts or each primary account has previously been approved an interim rate as estimated by the company shall be used until approved by the Board.

(F) As soon as the information can be assembled the company shall file with the Board rates estimated to be appropriate for each primary account or each group of primary accounts covering depreciable plant. Non-depreciable plant shall not be included in calculating the rates or in applying them. These rates shall be based on the estimated service values and estimated service lives of the plant developed by a study of the company's history and experience and such engineering and other information as may be available with respect to future conditions. Such rates shall, for each primary account or group of primary accounts comprised of more than one class of plant, produce a charge for depreciation equal to the sum of the amounts that would otherwise be chargeable as depreciation for each of the various classes of plant included in such account or such group of accounts. The rates when filed shall be accompanied by a statement showing the bases therefor and the methods employed in their computation, and may be developed by the company by the method deemed most appropriate in the light of the company's retirement experience.

(G) After the effective date of this System of Accounts, records shall be maintained so that when plant is retired, details will be available to show the service life, cost of removal, and the proceeds from salvage of each class of depreciable plant.

The company shall be prepared at any time, upon direction of the Board, to compute and submit for its approval revised rates in cases where existing rates are deemed inapplicable.

(H) In the event rates approved by the Board, in the judgment of the company, become no longer applicable, the company shall in like manner file revised rates which in its judgment should be established. Where plant is acquired for which no rates have been approved, the company shall upon such acquisition, compile and submit to the Board appropriate estimates developed in accordance with the provisions of sub-paragraph (F) of these instructions.

(I) When the company wishes to change from depreciation accounting to amortization accounting in view of probable abandonment of plant, the approval of the Board is required. (See account No. 106, "Accumulated Amortization—Gas Plant".)

11. INSURANCE

Insurance costs shall be charged to account No. 723, "Insurance" unless the costs are incurred in connection with construction, employee benefits or charged to clearing accounts. Insurance costs relative to construction of pipe line facilities shall be charged pro rata to the plant accounts. Insurance costs relative to employee benefits shall be charged to account No. 725, "Employee Benefits". Amounts recovered from such insurance shall be credited to the account or accounts charged with the related loss.

Account No. 723, "Insurance" shall also be charged with estimated amounts in lieu of commercial insurance premiums, if the company elects to create and maintain reserves for self-insurance. A schedule of risks covered by self-insurance shall be kept, showing the character of risk and the rates used to compute the estimated charges. Such rates shall be reasonable in the circumstances. Claims paid, damages suffered, repairs made, or loss because of plant retired, when covered by the self-insurance schedule, shall be charged to the insurance reserve. To the extent that the loss is not covered by the insurance reserve, such loss shall be charged to the appropriate expense account.

If the company reinsures self-carried risks with a commercial insurance company, premiums for such policies shall be debited to the insurance reserve and recoveries under the policies shall also be credited thereto.

12. FUNDS, RESERVES AND APPROPRIATIONS

When certain assets such as cash and securities have been set aside for a specific purpose, such assets shall be included in account No. 122, "Sinking Funds", or account No. 123, "Miscellaneous Special Funds", as applicable. The company's contributions to these funds shall be appropriated from retained earnings or charged to expense and shall be credited to account No. 290, "Insurance Reserves", account No. 291, "Welfare and Pension Reserves", or account No. 292, "Injuries and Damages Reserves", as applicable.

Income from assets held in account No. 122, "Sinking Funds", and account No. 123, "Miscellaneous Special Funds", shall be credited to account No. 316, "Income from Sinking and Other Funds". When it is required by the trust deed or other similar agreements that the income be retained in specific funds, cash and/or securities shall be transferred to the fund applicable. Where such income must be added to the fund, the company shall charge account No. 329, "Other Income Deductions", and credit the appropriate reserve account.

Profits and losses from the sale of assets held in account No. 122, "Sinking Funds", and account No. 123, "Miscellaneous Special Funds", shall be accounted for in the same manner as the income from assets held in these accounts and indicated in the preceding paragraphs.

13. SECURITIES OWNED

The investment in securities by the company shall be recorded in the respective accounts at cost at the time of acquisition, excluding amounts paid for accrued interest and dividends receivable.

Temporary cash investments—When temporary cash investments with a short term fixed maturity date are purchased at a discount or premium, such discount or premium may be amortized over the remaining life of the securities by periodical debits or credits to the account in which the cost of the securities is recorded with corresponding credits or debits to account No. 314, "Income from Investments". If the amount to be amortized is not material, the company may write off the total discount or premium at one time.

Profits and losses on sales, or amounts required to provide allowances for the decrease in market value of temporary cash investments shall be recorded in account No. 314, "Income from Investments", where minor and to account No. 352, "Profit from Sale of Investments" or account No. 356, "Loss from Sale of Investments", where material.

Other investments—When securities with a fixed maturity date, other than temporary cash investments are purchased at a discount or premium, such discount or premium may be amortized over the remaining life of the securities by periodical debits or credits to the account in which the cost of the securities is recorded with corresponding credits or debits to account No. 314, "Income from Investments". If the amount to be amortized is not material, the company may write off the total discount or premium at one time.

No amortization entries shall be recorded in respect of discount on securities held as investments unless there is reason to believe the securities will be disposed of at a sum equal to par, or par will be collected at maturity.

With respect to the company's investment in securities, the company shall be governed by recognized accounting principles in writing down their ledger value to reflect anticipated loss in value, and may write them off entirely if there is no reasonable prospect of realizing any amount therefrom. Fluctuations in market value should not be recorded. However, major decreases in market value should be provided for when they become apparent.

A company may provide for decrease in the value of securities owned and recorded in account No. 132, "Temporary Cash Investments", account No. 120, "Investments in Affiliated Companies", or account No. 121, "Other Long Term Investments". (See account No. 126, "Allowance for Loss in Value of Investments" and account No. 132, "Temporary Cash Investments".)

The amount of the adjustment to the investment in a controlled company (as defined under General Instructions, Section 18) shall be charged to account No. 315, "Income from Investments in Affiliated Companies" or if the amount of the adjustment is unusually large, the adjustment shall be charged to account No. 359, "Other Charges".

When losses have previously been provided for in the manner prescribed in the previous paragraph and such losses are subsequently reduced by profitable years, the company shall adjust the charges of previous years by taking into income the corresponding credits in respect of the profits earned. Such profit shall be credited to account No. 315, "Income from Investments in Affiliated Companies" or account No. 354, "Other Credits", as may be appropriate.

14. SECURITIES ISSUED

For purposes of this classification of accounts, premium is the excess value of the consideration received from the issue or resale of securities over the par or stated value of the company long term debt or similar obligations; discount is the excess of the par or stated value over the value of the consideration; expenses comprise amounts paid to underwriters, brokers, salesmen and agents for marketing securities. Interest or dividends accrued are not to be included as part of either premium or discount. Separate ledger accounts shall be maintained for each class or subclass of securities such as stocks, bonds, or notes, with respect to which the issue or resale is at a premium or discount. Except as otherwise provided under "Cost of Interest During Construction" (see Section 6, "Plant Acquired or Constructed"), no discount or expenses in respect of long term debt shall be charged to or included in any account as part of the cost of acquiring plant, tangible or intangible, or as part of the cost of operation. Premiums on capital stock shall be entered in account No. 210, "Contributed Surplus".

Discounts and premiums on long term debt, fees and expenses paid to underwriters and brokers for marketing, and other expenses of an issue, shall be netted in account No. 170, "Unamortized Debt Discount and Expense", or account No. 270, "Unamortized Debt Premium", as applicable. Separate sub-accounts shall be maintained for discount, premium and expense applicable to each issue. The cost of issuing other long term debt shall be charged to account No. 170, "Unamortized Debt Discount and Expense", or to account No. 359, "Other Charges". If such amount is not material in relation to net income, then such amount may be charged to account No. 329, "Other Income Deductions".

The unamortized debt discount, premium and expense shall be amortized on an equitable basis over the life of the issue by monthly charges to account No. 321, "Amortization of Debt Discount, Premium and Expense".

When part of an issue is redeemed, other than being refunded, the portion of unamortized debt discount, premium and expense applicable to the debt redeemed shall be removed from the asset account No. 170, "Unamortized Debt Discount and Expense", or account No. 270, "Unamortized Debt Premiums", by a charge or credit to account No. 321, "Amortization of Debt Discount, Premium and Expense". If the amount is so large that its inclusion would unduly distort the income results for the period, it shall be charged or credited to retained earnings accounts.

Where any long term debt is refunded by the company before the original maturity date of the issue, the unamortized debt discount, premium and expense applicable to the debt refunded shall be charged or credited to income accounts either in the year of refunding, or over a period not exceeding the remainder of the original life of the issue retired. If the amount is so large that its inclusion would unduly distort the income results for the period, it shall be charged or credited to retained earnings accounts.

15. CURRENT ASSETS AND LIABILITIES

The accounts for current assets and current liabilities are comprised of amounts available for payment of current liabilities and amounts chargeable against current resources. Although not available for payment of current liabilities, material and supplies are also to be included as current assets. Obsolete repair parts and supplies for which there is no foreseeable use are not current assets, unless carried at their scrap value.

Current assets shall include only amounts the collection of which is reasonably anticipated within one year in the normal course of business, and such other assets as may properly be classified as current assets in accordance with generally accepted accounting practice. Items of current character but of doubtful value, previously credited to revenue, expense, or income accounts, shall be written down or written off by debit to the account or accounts previously credited except that uncollectible accounts receivable shall be charged to account No. 145, "Allowance for Doubtful Accounts", or account No. 728, "Other Administrative and General Expense", as applicable.

16. ACCRUED ASSETS AND LIABILITIES

If the effect of any transaction upon income of the period in which it occurs cannot be determined before the accounts are closed, the estimated asset or liability resulting therefrom shall be credited or charged to the appropriate balance sheet, revenue, expense, or income account according to the nature of the transaction. Companies shall indicate to the Board any material change in the practice of accounting for year-end accruals. Companies are not required to anticipate items which would not appreciably affect the accounts.

When an accrued asset or liability is finally determined, the estimate shall be adjusted through the respective accounts originally credited or debited. At any time, if a substantial error is found in an initial estimate of this sort, it shall be adjusted currently through the same accounts.

Adjustments arising during the current year which are applicable to prior years, shall be included in the same account which would have been charged or credited if the item had been taken up or adjusted in the year to which it pertained. When the amount of the adjustment is so material that its inclusion in the appropriate account for the current year would seriously distort the income for the current year, the amount of the delayed item may be credited to account No. 354, "Other Credits", or charged to account No. 359, "Other Charges", as may be appropriate.

17. CONTINGENT ASSETS AND LIABILITIES

Contingent assets and liabilities shall not be included in the body of the balance sheet statement, but, if significant, shall be shown in detail in a supplementary statement. Contingent assets are those the value of which is dependent upon the fulfillment of conditions regarded as uncertain. Contingent liabilities are those which may under certain conditions become obligations of the company, but are neither direct nor assumed obligations on the date of the balance sheet.

18. AFFILIATED COMPANIES

The term "affiliated companies" used in this classification of accounts includes subsidiary companies and holding companies.

(1) For the purposes of this classification a company shall be deemed to be a subsidiary of another company if,

(a) it is controlled by,

(i) that other company, or

(ii) that other company and one or more companies each of which is controlled by that other company, or

(iii) two or more companies each of which is controlled by that other company; or

(b) it is a subsidiary of a company which is that other company's subsidiary.

(2) For the purposes of this classification, one company shall be deemed to be affiliated to another company if one of them is the subsidiary of the other or both are subsidiaries of the same company or each of them is controlled by the same person.

(3) For the purposes of this classification, a company shall be deemed to be another's holding company if that other is its subsidiary.

(4) For the purposes of this classification, a company shall be deemed to be controlled by another company or person or by two or more companies, if shares of the first-mentioned company carrying more than 50 per cent of the voting rights are held, otherwise than by way of security only, by or for the benefit of such other company or person or by or for the benefit of such other companies.

100. GAS PLANT IN SERVICE

This account shall include the cost of plant, property and equipment (including that held under contract for purchase) in service at the date of the balance sheet.

This account shall also include the cost of improvements made to leased facilities, where such improvements are used in gas service and the company is not to be reimbursed by the lessor for such improvements.

When plant (including leased facilities) is retired from service, this account shall be credited with the ledger value of the plant retired and a like amount shall be concurrently charged to account No. 103, "Retirement Work in Progress". (See General Instructions, Section 8.)

The plant included in this account shall be classified according to the detailed accounts for such plant. The cost of improvements to leased facilities shall be maintained in subdivisions separate from those relating to owned plant.

NOTE : Improvements to facilities leased on a short term basis shall be included in account No. 179, "Other Deferred Charges".

101. GAS PLANT LEASED TO OTHERS

This account shall include the cost of gas plant owned by the utility, but leased to others as operating units or systems, where the lessee has exclusive possession.

The plant included in this account shall be classified according to the detailed accounts prescribed for gas plant in service and this account shall be maintained in such detail as though the plant were used by the Company in its operations.

102. GAS PLANT HELD FOR FUTURE USE

This account shall include the cost of plant owned and held for future use in gas service. There shall be included herein plant acquired but never used by the utility in gas service, but held for such service in the future, and plant previously used by the utility in gas service, but retired from such service and held pending its re-use in the future in gas service. This includes land and land rights held to ensure a future supply of natural gas.

The plant included in this account shall be classified according to the detailed accounts prescribed for gas plant in service and the account shall be maintained in such detail as though the plant were in service. Separate sub-accounts shall be maintained hereunder for each department for which plant is held for future use.

NOTE : Include in this account natural gas wells shut in after construction which have not been connected with the line; also, natural gas wells which have been connected with the line but which are shut in for any reason excepting seasonal excess capacity or government proration requirements or for repairs.

103. RETIREMENT WORK IN PROGRESS

This account shall include amounts concurrently credited to account Nos. 100, "Gas Plant in Service", 101, "Gas Plant Leased to Others" and 102, "Gas Plant Held for Future Use" in respect of gas plant retired from service.

It shall also be charged with all costs incurred on removal, demolition and dismantling of gas plant during the course of its retirement. Amounts recovered for salvage and insurance on gas plant retired shall be credited hereto.

When final costs of each retirement are established, the ledger value and the cost of removal less amounts recovered shall be transferred to:

account No. 105, "Accumulated Depreciation—Gas Plant" or account No. 106, "Accumulated Amortization—Gas Plant", as applicable.

104. GAS PLANT ACQUISITION ADJUSTMENTS

This account shall include the difference between the cost to the company of gas plant acquired by purchase, merger, amalgamation, consolidation, liquidation or otherwise, and the net amount approved by the Board to be properly includible in plant and accumulated depreciation accounts. (See General Instructions, Section 6.)

This account shall be subdivided to show the amounts applicable to gas plant in service, gas plant leased to others and gas plant held for future use.

The amounts recorded in this account with respect to each acquisition shall be amortized or otherwise disposed of as approved by the Board.

105. ACCUMULATED DEPRECIATION—GAS PLANT

This account shall be credited with the following:

(1) Amounts charged to account No. 303, "Depreciation", or to clearing accounts, for current depreciation expense.

(2) At the option of the Company, amounts charged to Retained Earnings for past accrued depreciation.

(3) At the option of the Company, subject to the determination by the Board that the amounts result from the recording of redetermined plant values, amounts for past accrued depreciation charged to account No. 216, "Excess of Redetermined Value of Plant over Depreciated Cost" instead of to Retained Earnings.

(4) Amounts of depreciation applicable to gas plant acquired as operating units or systems from an affiliated company. (See General Instructions, Section 6.)

(5) Amounts charged to account No. 171, "Extraordinary Plant Losses". (See Section 8 (A) of these General Instructions.)

At the time of retirement of depreciable gas plant this account shall be charged with the ledger value of the plant and the cost of removal, and shall be credited with amounts recovered for salvage and insurance. (See General Instructions, Section 8, "Retirements".)

This account shall be subdivided as follows:

- (1) Accumulated depreciation—gas plant in service
- (2) Accumulated depreciation—gas plant leased to others
- (3) Accumulated depreciation—gas plant held for future use

For general ledger and balance sheet purposes, this account shall be regarded and treated as a composite reserve. However, for purposes of analysis, the company shall maintain subsidiary records in which the accumulated depreciation is subdivided into component parts corresponding to the gas plant accounts or groups of accounts comprised of plants which perform similar functions, showing in detail the current debits and credits. (See General Instructions, Section 10.)

106. ACCUMULATED AMORTIZATION—GAS PLANT

This account shall be credited with amounts concurrently charged to account No. 304, "Amortization", when the utility must extinguish amounts carried in account Nos. 100, "Gas Plant in Service", 101, "Gas Plant Leased to Others", or 102, "Gas Plant Held for Future Use", relating to probable abandonment of all or a significant part of gas plant or severe permanent curtailment in operations. When there is a change from depreciation accounting to amortization accounting, the applicable balance in account No. 105, "Accumulated Depreciation—Gas Plant", shall be transferred to this account.

This account shall be charged at the time of retirement with the ledger value of the gas plant retired and the cost of removal less amounts recovered for salvage and insurance, and the difference between the accumulated amortization and the aforementioned amount in respect of such gas plant retired shall be credited or charged, as the case may be, to account No. 319, "Other Income" or account No. 329, "Other Income Deductions", as applicable. When the retirement results in an extraordinary loss, this amount shall be charged to account No. 355, "Loss from Sale or Retirement of Plant" or all or a portion of the loss may be charged to account No. 171, "Extraordinary Plant Losses". Where the retirement results in an extraordinary profit, this amount shall be credited to account No. 351, "Profit from Sale of Plant".

It is not required that balances in this account shall be broken down into component parts corresponding to the plant accounts but the account shall be subdivided as follows:

- (1) Accumulated amortization—gas plant in service
- (2) Accumulated amortization—gas plant leased to others
- (3) Accumulated amortization—gas plant held for future use

107. OTHER GAS PLANT ADJUSTMENTS

(A) This account shall include the difference between the amount approved by the Board to be properly includible in plant and the book value of the gas utility plant at the effective date of the uniform system of accounts, to the extent that such difference is not properly includible in account No. 104, "Gas Plant Acquisition Adjustments".

(B) The amounts included in this account shall be classified in such a manner as to show the nature of each amount included herein, and shall be disposed of as the Board may approve or determine.

NOTE : The provisions of this account shall not be construed as approving or authorizing future recording of appreciation in the value of gas utility plant in the accounts.

(See General Instructions, Section 6, and account No. 216, "Excess of Redetermined Value of Plant over Depreciated Cost".)

108. ACCUMULATED AMORTIZATION—GAS PLANT ACQUISITION ADJUSTMENTS

This account shall be credited (or debited) with amounts which are includible in account No. 304, "Amortization", or such other account as the Board may determine, for the purpose of extinguishment of amounts charged or credited in account No. 104, "Gas Plant Acquisition Adjustments", where the amortization of account No. 104 is not being made by an immediate write-off of the account.

110. OTHER PLANT

This account shall include the cost of land, structures, equipment or other tangible or intangible plant owned by the utility, but not used in gas service and not properly includible in account Nos. 101, "Gas Plant Leased to Others", 102, "Gas Plant Held for Future Use" or 115, "Gas Plant Under Construction".

This account shall be subdivided so as to show the amount of plant used in operations which are nonutility in character but nevertheless constitute a distinct operating activity of the company and the amount of miscellaneous plant not used in operations. The records in support of each sub-account shall be maintained so as to show an appropriate classification of the plant.

111. ACCUMULATED DEPRECIATION—OTHER PLANT

This account shall be credited with amounts of depreciation concurrently charged to account No. 303, "Depreciation" to cover loss in service value of depreciable plant, the cost of which is included in account No. 110, "Other Plant". It shall also be credited with any amounts the company may charge to account No. 359, "Other Charges" in respect of past accumulated depreciation not provided for.

The company may, at the time of retirement of depreciable plant, charge this account with the ledger value of the plant retired and cost of removal, and credit it with the amounts recovered from salvage and insurance. Where the company does not follow this procedure in the retirement of other plant, then at the time of retirement this account shall be charged with the accumulated depreciation of the plant retired and profits or losses on the sale of such plant shall be included in account No. 319, "Other Income", or account No. 329, "Other Income Deductions" as applicable. If the profits or losses are material in relation to net income for the year they shall be included in account No. 351, "Profit from Sale of Plant", or account No. 355, "Loss from Sale or Retirement of Plant", as applicable.

112. ACCUMULATED AMORTIZATION—OTHER PLANT

This account shall be credited with amounts concurrently charged to account No. 304, "Amortization", when the utility must extinguish amounts carried in account No. 110, "Other Plant", relating to probable abandonment of all or a significant part of other plant or severe permanent curtailment in operations. When there is a change from depreciation accounting to amortization accounting, the applicable balance in account No. 111, "Accumulated Depreciation—Other Plant", shall be transferred to this account.

The company may, at the time of retirement of amortizable plant charge this account with the ledger value of the plant retired and cost of removal, and credit it with the amounts recovered from salvage and insurance. Where the company does not follow this procedure in the retirement of other plant then at the time of retirement this account shall be charged with the accumulated amortization of the plant retired and profits or losses on the sale of such plant shall be included in account No. 319, "Other Income", or account No. 329, "Other Income Deductions" as applicable. If the profits or losses are material in relation to net income for the year they shall be included in account No. 351, "Profit from Sale of Plant", or account No. 355, "Loss from Sale or Retirement of Plant", as applicable.

It shall also include taxes during construction and other elements of cost of such construction work. When any plant, the cost of construction of which has been included in this account, is completed and ready for service the cost thereof shall be credited to this account and charged to the primary plant accounts appropriate to the character of the plant.

63.—(1) No petition for any Private Bill is received by the House after the first two weeks of each Session nor may any Private Bill be presented to the House after the first three weeks of each Session; nor may any report of any Standing or Select Committee upon a Private Bill be received after the first six weeks of each Session; and no motion for the general suspension or modification of this Rule shall be entertained by the House unless after reference made thereof, at a previous sitting of the House, to the several Standing Committees charged with the consideration of Private Bills upon Report submitted to two or more of such committees.

64.—(1) Any person desiring to obtain a Private Bill shall deposit with the Clerk of the House at least eight (8) days before the meeting of the House a copy of such Bill together with a fee of $150, and if such Bill is not deposited by that time the applicant shall pay $10 for each and every day which intervenes between the said eighth day and the date of the filing of the Bill.

(2) After the first reading of the Bill and before its consideration by the Committee to which it is referred, the applicant in every case shall pay the cost of printing the Act in the Statutes.

Such notice shall be continued in each case for a period of at least six weeks, during the interval of time between the close of the next preceding Session and the consideration of the Petition.

If the application is by a Municipal Corporation for authority to issue debentures, the notice shall set out the particulars of the existing debenture debt and the amount of rateable property of the Municipality according to the last revised assessment roll of the Corporation, and in brief and general terms the object for which the new issue of debentures is required.

67. - (a) readily accessible for use in case of accident or fire during loading or unloading operations;
- (b) as far as practicable from any fill-opening or discharge-faucet; and
- (c) provided with a fusible section to close automatically in case of fire.

(17) Commencing 180 days after this Regulation comes into force, all shut-off valves referred to in subsection 15 shall be so designed that,

- (a) they are as close as is physically possible to the shell of the tank; and
- (b) immediately downstream from such valves there shall be a connection designed to separate upon impact or strain in such a manner as not to damage the valve or to separate the valve from the tank shell.

(18) Every tank truck, trailer or semi-trailer that is used for the transportation of gasoline or associated products is exempt from the provisions of subsection 15 only if it was already in use on the date this Regulation came into force.

(19) All valves, piping and associated connections shall be protected from damage due to collision from the rear.

(20) The protection referred to in subsection 19 shall be sufficient for this Regulation where the protection is provided either by the frame of the vehicle or by a bumper or guard, or both, or by some other device giving equal protection and in such a manner that the valves, piping and associated connections are protected from collision with an object that could over-ride or under-pass the said frame, bumper or other device.

(21) Every draw-off valve and faucet shall be threaded at the discharge end or designed to permit tight connection to the delivery hose.

(22) Every valve shall be designed and maintained to prevent leakage and shall be of the anti-drip type.

(23) When the outlet valve of tank trucks, trailers or semi-trailers carrying Class I or Class II products is not in actual use the valve handle shall be detached or where the handle cannot be detached, the valve, or cabinet containing the valve, shall be kept locked.

(24) Notwithstanding subsection 23, where the pump is immobilized by the locking of the ignition, the valve handle need not be detached and the valve or cabinet need not be locked.

(25) Vehicle tanks and vehicle chassis shall be constructed and maintained to provide electrical continuity between them.

(26) Before each filling of a tank truck, trailer or semi-trailer, and before each discharge from a tank truck, trailer or semi-trailer to an aboveground facility, all static electricity shall be discharged.

(27) Where the condition of the ground prohibits the use of a ground spike, the vehicle shall be grounded to the facility from which the vehicle is to be filled or to which it is to be discharged, by first connecting the static cable to a bonding clip on that facility, and then connecting the other end of the static cable to the vehicle.

(28) For vehicles in use when this Regulation comes into force, where a separate grounding or static cable is not available, a built-in grounding cable in the hose of the tank truck, trailer or semi-trailer is acceptable when discharging into aboveground facilities.

(29) Subsection 28 is valid only until a hose with a built-in grounding cable requires replacement or until the grounding cable is tested and found ineffective at which time subsection 27 applies.

(30) Subject to subsections 32, 33 and 34, every tank truck, trailer and semi-trailer shall be constructed and marked in accordance with ICC Specs. MC 300, 302, 303 and 305 dated January, 1965, as applicable.

(31) Subject to compliance with subsection 44, subsection 30 does not preclude the transportation of gasoline and associated products in vehicles constructed and marked in accordance with ICC Spec. MC 304 dated January, 1965.

(32) Material other than that specified in the ICC Specs. referred to in subsection 30 may be used where the material has strength not less than that of the metal prescribed in the ICC Specs.

(33) The joints of the shell and of the head shall be so tight that there will be no leakage when the joints are subjected to a pressure of not less than 3 psig applied from inside the shell for a period of not less than one hour.

(34) Notwithstanding subsection 30, the following tables list the ICC Specs. that are modified by this Regulation:

(57) Every stake truck, tank truck, tractor, trailer or semi-trailer operated or parked singly or in combination, shall at all times be equipped with a parking brake of the design referred to in subsection 59 or chock blocks, or both, adequate to prevent movement of the vehicle when parked either singly or in combination on any grade on which the vehicle is operated or parked and under any condition of loading.

(58) The parking brake shall at all times be capable of being applied by the operator while he is in his seat, either by the operator's muscular effort or by spring action and, when the parking brake is applied by the operator's muscular effort, chock blocks shall be carried and positioned, with respect to at least one wheel of the vehicle or combination of vehicles, immediately in front, to the rear, or both, as necessary.

(59) The parking brake shall be so designed, constructed and maintained that when once applied,

(a) it shall remain in the applied condition, with the effectiveness required by subsection 57, despite exhaustion of any source of energy or leakage of any kind; and

(b) it cannot be released unless adequate energy is available in the brake system upon release to make an immediate further effective application.

(60) The parking brake referred to in subsection 59 shall be set or the chock blocks shall be positioned whenever the vehicle is parked, including parking for loading and unloading.

(61) Every vehicle used for the transportation of any gasoline or associated product, regardless of the quantity being transported, or regardless of whether the vehicle is loaded or unloaded, shall be conspicuously and legibly marked on each side and the rear, in letters at least 3 inches high and of a colour that contrasts sharply with the background,

(a) with the word "Flammable";

(b) with the common name of the product being transported; or

(c) with the name of the carrier or his trademark, when, and only when, the name or trade mark plainly indicates the flammable nature of the cargo.

(62) Subject to subsection 63, a vehicle, whether or not it has dispensing pumps, shall not be used for the retail refueling of another vehicle.

(63) Subsection 62 does not apply to the use of approved vehicles in refueling a contractor's construction equipment on a job site.

PART 4

STORAGE AND HANDLING AT BULK-STORAGE PLANTS

6.—(1) This Part applies to,

- (a) the construction of storage tanks used for storing gasoline and associated products at bulk-storage plants; and

- (b) the siting of tanks and associated equipment, and the manner of operation thereof, in bulk-storage plants.

(2) This Part applies to every bulk-storage plant other than a bulk-storage tank that was in use on the 11th day of June, 1954, in which case the owner of the tank is exempt from the provisions of subsection 7 whether the owner,

- (a) owned the tank at that date; or

- (b) acquired the tank at any time subsequent to that date, but only so long as the tank remains installed in the same place and position as it was at that date.

(3) No tank installed aboveground or underground and consisting of two or more compartments shall be used for any gasoline or associated product unless the compartments are separated by,

- (a) double bulkheads having between them a drained air space; or

- (b) a flanged single bulkhead so constructed that any liquid or gas seeping or leaking through any seam or joint will escape directly to open air and not between compartments.

(4) Subject to subsection 5, the outside of every tank fabricated of any ferrous substance, whether galvanized or not, shall be thoroughly coated with rust-resisting material compatible with the substance of which the tank is fabricated.

(5) Where there is evidence to indicate a higher degree of corrosion than that provided for in the design formula used, additional metal thickness or protective coatings or linings shall be provided to compensate for the corrosion loss expected during the design life of the tank.

(6) Tanks for use in bulk-storage plants shall be designed in accordance with sound engineering principles, and shall be of steel except that tanks fabricated of materials other than steel shall be designed to specifications embodying principles recognized as good engineering design for the material used and shall be approved.

- (b) be equipped with,
- (i) screen-type flame arrestors, for Class I products, or
- (ii) venting devices that normally remain closed except when subjected to pressure or vacuum; and
- (c) be fabricated or equipped with devices so that abnormal internal pressures in the tank that might rupture the shell or bottom will be relieved.
- (19) In a vertical or horizontal tank, relief of abnormal internal pressure may be provided by,

- (b) in the event of an escape of Class I or Class II products from the tank, the products are likely to flow in a manner which would,
 - (i) create a hazard to public health or safety,
 - (ii) contaminate any fresh water source or waterway,
 - (iii) interfere with the rights of any person, or
 - (iv) allow entry of product into a sewer system or underground stream or drainage system,

- (b) a flanged single bulkhead so constructed that any liquid or gas seeping or leaking through any seam or joint will escape directly to open air and not between compartments.

(20) The outside of every tank fabricated of any ferrous substance, whether galvanized or not, shall be thoroughly coated with a rust-resisting material compatible with the substance of which the tank is fabricated.

(21) Tanks shall be designed in accordance with sound engineering principles and shall be of steel except that tanks fabricated of materials other than steel shall be designed to specifications embodying principles recognized as good engineering design for the material used, and shall be approved.

(22) Tanks referred to in column 1 of the following Table shall be fabricated and tested in accordance with the standards set opposite thereto in column 2, column 3 or column 4:

TABLE

COLUMN 1	COLUMN 2	COLUMN 3	COLUMN 4
Tank Types	Underwriters' Laboratories of Canada Standards	American Petroleum Institute Standards	Canadian Standards Association Standard
Underground tanks	C58/Jan. 1962		Z87/1960
Inside tanks	C80/July 1960
Aboveground tanks	C142/Dec. 1965

Rivetted aboveground tanks		12A/1941—Re-issued 1951

(23) The normal operating pressure of a tank shall not exceed its design pressure.

(24) Where there is evidence to indicate a higher degree of corrosion than that provided for in the design formula used, additional metal thickness or protective coatings or linings shall be provided to compensate for the corrosion loss expected during the design life of the tank.

(25) All piping associated with gasoline or associated products storage tanks, whether the piping is aboveground or underground, shall be painted, coated or otherwise protected from external corrosion.

(26) Every tank shall be vented by vent piping.

(27) Vent piping shall not extend into the tank more than one inch except where the vent is equipped with a vent alarm,

(28) Vent openings shall be of cross-sectional area sufficient to permit free escape of air and vapour when the tank is being filled at its maximum intake capacity.

(29) Except where the fill intake is controlled automatically by the pressure in the tank, the free cross-sectional area of the vent opening shall be not less than that of a pipe of $1\frac{1}{4}$ of an inch internal diameter and in the case of vents equipped with a weather-proof hood and a flame arrestor, the effective opening shall be not less than that of a pipe of two inches internal diameter.

(30) Every vent pipe shall,

- (a) be provided with a weather-proof hood and either a screen-type flame arrestor or a pressure-vacuum vent; and

- (b) terminate in open air,
 - (i) not less than seven feet for Class II products, and twelve feet for Class I products, above general grade level,
 - (ii) outside buildings, at a point close to the building wall and in such a position that fumes from the vent cannot enter nor be drawn into any building through a window, door or other opening, including air intakes, or
 - (iii) when venting Class I product tanks, not less than twenty-five feet from truck loading or parking facilities, or other likely sources of ignition.
- (31) A tank installed aboveground shall,
 - (a) have vent openings sufficient to permit free outflow or inflow of air normal to,
 - (i) filling or emptying operations, and
 - (ii) temperature changes,
 so that neither the shell nor the roof will be distorted under normal pressures;
 - (b) be equipped with,
 - (i) screen-type flame arrestors, for Class I products, or
 - (ii) venting devices that normally remain closed except when subjected to pressure or vacuum; and
 - (c) be fabricated or equipped with devices so that abnormal internal pressures in the tank that might rupture the shell or bottom will be relieved.
- (32) In a vertical or horizontal tank, relief of abnormal internal pressure may be provided by,
 - (a) a self-closing man-hole cover;
 - (b) a man-hole cover so constructed that it lifts when the internal pressure exceeds a pre-determined amount; or
 - (c) a system of emergency relief-valving.
- (33) In a vertical tank the relief of abnormal internal pressure may also be provided by means of a weakened seam or joint in the roof.
- (34) Aboveground tanks and dispensing facilities shall be installed in such a manner that they are securely positioned to prevent accidental overturning, and shall be protected against accidental damage from collision or similar incident.
- (35) The bottom of an aboveground tank shall not be more than twenty-four inches above ground level unless the tank support is protected by a substantial barrier.
- (36) No dispensing equipment for Class I or Class II product shall be located,
 - (a) inside any wholly enclosed part of a building;
 - (b) within twenty-five feet of a fixed source of ignition, other than approved overhead heating units, and if the source of ignition is within a nearby structure, the twenty-five feet clearance may be reduced, provided that the wall on the structure that is adjacent to the dispensing equipment is of masonry construction and without openings.

(37) Every electrically operated pump shall have an easily accessible remote control switch.

(38) Every hose through which a Class I or Class II product is dispensed at the retail level shall be equipped with a valved nozzle of non-magnetic material so constructed that the valve,

- (a) can be kept open only by manual pressure and closes automatically immediately the manual pressure is released; or
- (b) has a latch-open device as an integral part of the assembly and automatically shuts off when,
 - (i) the gasoline tank is filled,
 - (ii) the valved nozzle falls from the filling neck of the vehicle tank, or
 - (iii) the valved nozzle is subject to rough usage or lack of proper lubrication, and the valved nozzle having such latch-open device shall be of a type tested and certified by a designated testing agency as conforming to an approved specification.

(39) Every hose through which a Class I or Class II product is dispensed in vehicle refueling facilities shall be restricted to a maximum length of fifteen useable feet.

(40) Gasoline and associated products shall be taken out of a bulk-storage tank by gravity flow, suction or any other mode that does not increase the internal pressure within the tank and no person shall use water, steam, gas or air under pressure for the purpose of delivering or removing gasoline or associated products stored in a bulk-storage tank.

(41) To reduce the danger of product mixing, such as gasoline in fuel oil,

- (a) all aboveground storage tanks, aboveground pipelines and valves, and underground storage tanks' fill-pipes shall be permanently marked to indicate the product in each tank, line and valve;
- (b) on aboveground storage tanks the product identification required by clause a shall be marked on at least two sides, in a size to ensure easy legibility from at least fifteen feet; and
- (c) such marking shall,
 - (i) conform to the colour and shape described in subsection 45 of section 5, and
 - (ii) be situated to provide clear identification both to operating and to fire-fighting personnel.

(42) At all times when a gasoline or associated product is being received, or loaded into conveyances, or handled at a bulk-storage plant or delivered from a bulk-storage plant, a person competent to undertake the operation shall be in constant immediate attendance at the specific place where the operation is being controlled.

(43) Only portable containers complying in all respects with subsection 20 of section 7 may be used for Class I products.

(44) No person shall dispense a Class I or Class II product to the fuel tank of a motor vehicle or of farm equipment while the engine thereof is running.

(45) Means shall be provided and used whereby a dispensing facility for gasoline or associated products may be kept locked while not in use.

(46) Dry grass, weeds, shrubbery, trees and combustible materials shall be kept cleared away from the area under, and within fifteen feet of, aboveground tanks and dispensing facilities.
